Outlook improving for on-campus radio

By ROGER HARRIS
and AL CROSS

The possibility of a campus radio station is brighter than at any time in the past, according to one of three student representatives on the University Radio Committee. Steve Cochran, a freshman mass communications major from Bowling Green, said the six-month-old committee will soon recommend to President Dero Downing that a carrier-current AM station be installed at Western.

"In all probability," Cochran said last week, "the committee report will recommend that a progressive system be installed, starting with a carrier-current station upon which the University can build a curriculum before moving up to a commercial station."

Other recommendations

Informed sources have said that the committee will also recommend establishment of a taping service for the University, to be associated with the station. Another recommendation reportedly advises implementation of a long-range plan, leading up to licensing an FM broadcast station.

The committee is expected to finalize its report at its next meeting on April 22. It will then send its findings to Downing, according to Dr. Henry Hardin, committee chairman.

Hardin refused to discuss the content of the report and noted that Cochran hadn't been to the last few meetings and wasn't up on the work of the committee.

Cochran acknowledged that he had missed the last three meetings because he was out of town, but said he had been recently briefed by another member about the committee's activities. He said the committee had met "12 or 15" times, and that his recent absences were not serious because he had been to all the other meetings.

Campus-only station

A carrier-current AM station could be heard only on campus, since its signal would be sent through the University electric system. Operations at the station itself would be very similar to a station with a transmitting antenna.

Hardin said the eight-man committee, three of whom are students, has been "thorough and extensive in its research and would recommend the logical choice." Though he wouldn't say what that choice was, he said the committee has looked into several campus operations around the state and is convinced of the need for some procedure for students to gain practical experience.

'Dozen' alternatives

"At least a dozen" alternatives were considered by the committee, Hardin said. He added that they were aware of the cost, space and facilities needed for all the alternatives, and their recommendation would be the alterna-

Regent post election set next week

By JAY WETHINGTON

A special election to determine the student member of the Board of Regents will be Thursday, April 25. The deadline to file for candidacy is 4 p.m. Thursday, April 18.

Jeff Consolo, newly-elected president of Associated Student Government, is ineligible to serve as student regent because the Kentucky Revised Statutes state: "If the president of the student body is not a full-time student who maintains permanent residency in the Commonwealth of Kentucky, a special election shall be held to select a full-time student who does maintain permanent residency in this Commonwealth as the student member." Consolo is from Mansfield, Ohio.

The position is open to all full-time students who are Kentucky residents, have at least 45 hours of college credit with at least a 2.25 grade point average, who are not on academic probation and who were full-time students at the University last semester.

Three students have filed for the office so far: Hank Miles, Greg McKinney and Mike Inman. Miles is a graduate student from Lexington, majoring in public service, McKinney is a junior speech major from Bowling Green and Inman is a junior government major from Harrodsburg.

By AL CROSS

Today is Steven D. Yater's last day as president of Associated Student Government (ASG). The Herald interviewed the Owensboro junior Sunday night to review the accomplishments and failures of ASG in the past year.

While running for president against Mike Fiorella last spring, Yater advocated expanded dormitory visitation, a campus radio station and an academic bankruptcy plan. "Yater...will get it done," he vowed then.

A year later, varying amounts of progress have been made on each of the three issues. One has been initiated, but the other two are only in the planning stages.

The academic bankruptcy plan, which allows a student to repeat up to 24 hours of courses in which grades of D or F were earned, while counting only the repeat grade, was approved by the Academic Council last summer. Yater said the new policy is "better than the proposal that was first submitted." Originally, ASG had asked for a plan similar to that at Indiana University, where a student can erase just the grades from a single poor semester.

Yater said much of the credit for implementation of academic bankruptcy should go to Dr. Gerald Edds, a member of the Board of Regents. After he talked with Edds, Yater said, action began to be taken on ASG's proposal.

On the campus radio station, Yater said, "I'm not going to see the whole thing in my time." But he said, "It's going to be a reality." He said the committee studying the feasibility of establishing a station will issue its report soon and that the report would make three specific recommendations to President Dero Downing and the Board of Regents. Yater declined to state what the recommendations would be but said a long-range plan to establish an FM station would probably be included.

Steve Yater

The issue on which Yater and ASG have seen the least progress is expanded visitation. At the beginning of the school year, Yater's goal had changed from "expanded visitation" to a more general "program designed to increase the attractiveness of dorm life."

In late September, 39 suggestions for dorm improvement were presented to the Board of Regents. Yater said most of the 39 changes have been made or are in the process of being made and that more will follow.

The 39 suggestions were drawn up by administrative vice president Glenn Jackson. "To be truthful," Yater said, "Jackson was charged with that area, and the real credit for the good changes in dormitories goes to Jackson and (Dean of Student Affairs Charles) Keown."

Yater said visitation was slow in expanding because of parental attitudes and noted that a questionnaire was mailed to 6,000 parents in late February, asking their opinions on housing policy.

"This is how the decision to liberalize dorm policies will be made," Yater added. "I would encourage all dormitory residents to solicit parental support for dorm improvements. If the overwhelming majority of parents support a change, it is my feeling that the University would undoubtedly move in that direction."

Yater said liberalization of housing policies would not attract more students to the dorms, a belief many students have espoused. He said mandatory housing was begun because of the wide gap between the cost of dorm improvements and the $325,000 deficit in last year's housing budget.

"When all the factors were weighed together, we had to go to mandatory housing...any other way wasn't fiscally feasible," he added. Yater was criticized by many students for voting in favor

King Awards night salutes blacks

By RAY HENDERSON

Twenty black Western students and a black fraternity were honored at the first annual Martin Luther King Memorial and Black Awards program here Sunday night.

The theme was "Black Advancement," and the program was sponsored by Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

Rogers Jackson, a member of Alpha Phi Alpha at the University of Louisville, served as master of ceremonies and opened the evening with a speech concerning the importance of

"Black Advancement."

Guest speakers were Beverly Williams, Miss Black Western 1972; Antoinette Wearren, Miss Black Western 1973; Addie Shelton, Most Outstanding Black Greek; Kenneth Dupree, president of the Afro-American History Club; and Mark Turner, president of the United Black Students.

Presidents of each black Greek organization made comments and Wearren gave a dramatic presentation of an excerpt from "A Raisin in the Sun," by Lorraine Hansberry. There was also a skit showing the advancement of blacks.

Highest Academic Standing were awarded freshman Angela White, sophomore Calandra Watts, junior Marilyn Moffitt and senior Paye Bradshaw.

Outstanding blacks in various fields were Alice Gatewood, art; Stephanie Madison, journalism; Burdette Bullock, mass communications; Greg McKinney, speech and Jim Simpson, music.

Outstanding black athletes were Clarence Jackson, football; Kent Allison, basketball; Bobby Ware, track and Bill Sheekles, baseball.

The award for the outstanding black Greek organization in community affairs was given to Omega Psi Phi for their programs at Parker-Bennett recreation center. The award for the most outstanding black in overall student involvement went to Turner.

Special recognition was given to Robert Deboe, Madison, Deborah Snorton and Robert Walton, members of this year's Who's Who at Western; Gatewood, Western's first black Homecoming queen; and Reginald Glass, the first black vice president of Associated Student Government and a representative from the Graduate College on the Academic Council.

The program was originally scheduled for Van Meter Auditorium, but was moved to the Garrett Conference Center Ballroom due to lighting problems. The Amazing Tones of Joy provided music.

Famed columnist and author

Carl Rowan to speak tonight

Dr. Carl T. Rowan, columnist for the Chicago Daily News and Publishers-Hall Syndicate, television commentator, author and former federal official, will speak at 8 tonight on "Where the Communists Won't Co-Exist."

The lecture, the sixth in the University Lecture Series, will be in the Garrett Conference Center Ballroom.

In addition to writings on international affairs, national politics and America's domestic woes, which are carried by more than 100 newspapers reaching 19 million families, Rowan is a roving editor for Reader's Digest and a television commentator for the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.

He also has served under the late President John F. Kennedy as deputy assistant secretary of state for public affairs, as a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations and as the ambassador to Finland. Under the late President Lyndon B. Johnson he also served as director of the U.S. Information Agency (USIA).

What's happening

Recreation Club to meet

The Recreation Majors' Club will meet tonight at 7:30 in Room 226 of Diddle Arena. Nominations of officers, details of the upcoming campout and projection for next year's club will be discussed at this final meeting of the semester.

Sorority rush table

A sorority rush table will be set up in the Downing University Center from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., April 22-23. A $5 registration fee will be required of all signees.

Engineering Tech lecture

Joseph White, a retired industrial relations manager, will speak on the industrial job market, how to interview prospective employees, structure of resumes and marketing tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Room 129, TCOW. The free lecture is sponsored by the Engineering Technology Club.

Pool tourney tonight

The "World's Greatest Pool Tournament," sponsored by Omega Psi Phi fraternity, will be tonight at 8:30 in the university center.

Alumnae and advisors to meet

All interested alumnae and alumnae advisors of the National Panhellenic Conference Sororities will meet tomorrow at 5 p.m. in the Center Theatre to discuss rush rules and ideas for the fall rush in August.

Nursing car wash

Nursing students will sponsor a car wash Saturday at Grant's Auto Center from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Proceeds will be used to send two students to the national convention in Salt Lake City.

Wild flowers lecture

The second in a series of lectures sponsored for the Kentucky Bicentennial by the Kentucky Building will feature a discussion of wild flowers of the Barren River Valley by Marjorie Claggett. She will speak at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Kentucky Building.

Mrs. Thacker new sorority coordinator

Mrs. Margaret Rose Thacker has been named coordinator of sorority affairs and student activities at Western.

Thacker, wife of Dr. Jack Thacker Jr., professor of history at Western, assumed her duties in the Office of Student Affairs on April 1. She has taught in Jefferson County and Houston, Texas, schools.

Thacker, who expects to complete requirements for the master's degree in history at Western in August, graduated from Murray in 1971 with a bachelor's degree in history and English. She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

She came to Western as a graduate student in history in 1971 and spent the fall semester of 1973 doing research in London.

Sadie Hawkins Day race, dance scheduled for Friday

Friday has been declared by ASG as Sadie Hawkins Day on campus, with two main events scheduled. The first is a race scheduled for 4 p.m., weather permitting. Ambitious girls wanting dates for the dance to be held Friday evening will get the opportunity to catch the objects of their intent. The race will be run between Downing University Center and Pearce-Ford Tower.

The street dance will be held in the Grise Hall parking lot at 8 p.m. The dance, sponsored by the Inter-Hall Council, will feature the "Blue Glass" band. Prizes will be awarded for the best dressed hillbilly couple at the dance.

In case of rain the dance will be held in the Cellar.

High school debate continues

More than 200 students from 21 Kentucky high schools are participating in debate, extemporaneous speaking, oratory, and dramatic interpretation at the National Forensic District tournament being held in the Garrett Conference Center through today.

According to Bill Davis, Western forensic coach, this is the sixth speech tournament

Western's club has participated in this year, but the first one of this type.

"This is a chance for Western to be of service to the Commonwealth," Davis said.

Students who win here will go on to the National Forensic Tournament in Dallas.

Judging is done by Western students, faculty, and staff.

Approaching regent ballot is a vital one

One election a month is plenty. It's too bad that Western students will be asked to vote again this month to select their most important representative, the student member of the Board of Regents. Unless some issue of great import is raised between now and April 25, our new regent will have a mandate even more laughable than the last election produced.

The winner of that election, Jeff Consolo, is ineligible to serve because he is an out-of-state student. Two years ago, in similar circumstances, the special election was held as part of the regular fall balloting. Not so this time.

There is good reason for holding the election now, since the board will meet this summer. Departing ASG president Steve Yater loses his seat on the board when his term expires today and the University is always mindful of legal considerations. If the election isn't held until fall, any action taken by the board this summer could be contested in court, on the basis of Yater's ineligibility.

Actually, it might be in the best interests of the student body for Yater to continue in the post, if not for the legal hassle. He has cultivated excellent relationships with nearly every regent, a particularly valuable quality for a student regent. Though Yater has maintained a low profile towards the students, his position as a regent has been stronger than that of any previous student member.

Yater, in fact, would be the best candidate for regent in the upcoming election, but he has said he will not run. Some have charged that a Yater-Consolo axis in ASG would turn Consolo into a puppet, and both men are sensitive about such accusations.

With the best-qualified candidate out of the picture, the race should be wide open. Three candidates have already filed, and more are expected to file before the Thursday deadline. Hopefully, those who decide to run will have better qualifications than a pretty face and flowery language, because next year's regent will have to help push various improvements in student life, including liberalization of housing policies.

Yater has said he will continue to voice his opinions on important issues facing the board, but the most important input must come from the student regent. That's why it's a shame to pick the regent at a time when no one is very interested in voting. For one thing, there is more danger of an unqualified candidate winning the race. For another, the predictable puny voting turnout can only hinder the effectiveness of the new regent at a time when his voice is sorely needed.

Thus, it is up to the student body to provide a mandate for their representative "the university's top policy-making body." It's hard to think you'll rise to the occasion. You never have in the past.

Letters to the editor

Concert complaint

I would like to commend Tom LaCivita and Ron Beck on this year's entertainment program. After a slow start, they got it together and brought the 'Doobie Brothers, Seals and Crofts, Harry Chapin and the Marshall Tucker Band to Western.

However, Monday night's concert was marred by the new seating arrangement and by excessive police "protection." The new seating arrangement prevented hundreds of students from sitting on the floor and detracted from the excitement a vibrant, dancing crowd adds to a concert. And if the rigid seating arrangement didn't stifle the crowd enough, there was constant surveillance of the crowd by the police. With all of the patrolling and checking going on, the students were left with the impression that they weren't trusted.

Paul Neal
307 W College Inn

Two more complaints

I have two complaints I would like to air.

The first deals with the recent ASG elections, and the crowd of campaigners near Downing Center. The crowd was annoying and made entrance into the center most difficult. May I suggest that campaigners be forced to stay 100 feet away from the polling building; that is, 100 feet away from Downing Center.

The second complaint deals with the "What's Happening" section. Several of the announcements in the April 9 edition lacked time and/or place of the event. This may be the organization's mistake or a series of misprints. In any case, I suggest closer editing.

Feels neglected

The International Club has been neglected by candidates for offices on campus. The last election was one example of this neglect. Not one of the candidates, except Steve Henry, gave any significance to the International Club. I personally voted for Steve Henry, not because of the person of Steve Henry, I never met him or talked to any one of his campaigners. But I know that he thinks about the International Club and gives it part of his attention, as he attended meetings of the Club to talk with the students in attendance.

I am not losing hope in better future understanding of the International Club. I hope for better cooperation between all the agents on campus for the benefit and betterment of this university. May God bless Western.

Sen. Sam was here

Last Wednesday morning, April 3, I had an enjoyable, although brief conversation with a distinguished visitor to Nashville: Sen. Sam Ervin, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the Watergate affair.

The Senator and I were waiting to board a flight to Washington. Sen. Ervin had spoken on Tuesday at Western and returned to Nashville late Tuesday night. He was most cordial and appeared to enjoy talking with the dozen or so boarding passengers who were also waiting for the slightly delayed flight (resulting from storm damage to the airport's radar).

Among other things, the Senator's advice to a young man in politics was "stay with it."

Later, aboard the plane, Senator Ervin indicated that it was pleasantly surprising to be able to fly in and out of a major city without having any local newsmen in tow. Perhaps this indicated the public's and the media's interest in Watergate is beginning to fade or, more probably, that Nashville's print and broadcast newsmen were caught with their collective notepads, microphones, cameras, (and pants) down.

Herald states letters policy

The Herald encourages letters from its readers on subjects of general concern. They must be signed and turned in at the Herald office before 2 p.m. on Monday or Thursday to appear in the next day's paper.

Letters should be typewritten if at all possible and should not exceed 250 words. Longer letters are subject to editing. In the case of elected student representatives who wish to express their views, this limit may be waived.

All letters received will be printed unless they are libelous, obscene or patently unfair. Due to space limitations, there may be a delay in publication of less timely letters.

Prestige and physical endurance typify ROTC unit

This is the third in a series on ROTC at Western.

By RONNIE ELLIS

Some students like to sleep in on Saturday and Sunday mornings, while others like the Special Forces Unit (SF's) of the Western ROTC detachment are crossing rivers in 30 - 40 degree weather or jumping down the face of an 85-foot cliff by 8 a.m.

At 5:30 in the morning, not much is astir. But from the top of the Western parking structure, thudding feet and strained voices, barking orders and responses, sometimes uttering profanities, can be heard.

"DROP!"

To the SF candidate to whom that command is given it can mean only one thing—push-ups. A minimum of 10 push-ups is standard procedure for a wrong answer, a weapon placed on the ground incorrectly or a calisthenic exercise not done properly.

Each of the ROTC cadets hoping to become active SF members can expect to be run through such a routine, which includes a "healthy" dose of eight-count push-ups, three or four times each morning. All of this in addition to the required calisthenics practiced with the group each morning for a month.

As with all of the other calisthenics, which last about 30 to 40 minutes, any facet of the exercise that fails to satisfy any of the active SF's, results in a command of 10 push-ups of the more familiar variety.

When the calisthenics are over, the candidates and actives alike run distances of up to a mile on most mornings. The goal is to build enough endurance to enable each cadet to run two miles in under 16 minutes.

The purpose of the harassment is not just kicks for the active members, according to Richards Shaw, who has been in the unit for two years.

"It makes a team of them and

builds a sense of kinship," Shaw said. This is necessary in a unit such as the SF's, because of the very nature of its makeup and objectives, he added.

He said the SF's were a "tactical small unit force, trained in counter guerrilla and counter insurgency tactics."

Why are these cadets willing to undergo this kind of physical punishment and harassment?

James Humble and Ray Sutherland, both of whom are veterans, mention the word "elite" when asked why cadets are willing to undergo the physical and mental strains.

"I want to be in as elite a group as possible," said Humble. "I enjoyed the PT (physical training) because I was out of shape," he added.

Of the harassment, Humble said, "It was kind of fun."

Sutherland, who works on a farm, milking one cow and feeding 65 every morning before PT, said he wanted to be an SF because of its elitist standing in the military.

"I had to get up every morning at 2:30 to feed the cows, and then get over here for PT by 5:30," Sutherland, a sophomore from Woodburn, said.

Bruce Dopp, who spent a summer at Marine camp while considering a career in the Marines, said he wanted to be an SF because "I like the stuff they do—rapelling and stuff."

Asked if he were considering a career in the Army, Dopp answered, "I would like to try it (the Army) on for a while and see if it fits, before making that decision."

Another active member of the unit, Charles Stevenson, a veteran, said he misses the military. The SF's and ROTC give him an opportunity to have a career as a commissioned officer and provide funds for a college degree.

Stevenson said the physical training of the Special Forces was "actually harder than regular basic training. If you do it wrong here, you re-do it, but in basic training everything is done by schedule."

Robert "Bo" Green, a member of last semester's candidate class and this semester's first sergeant for the new candidates, said the Army had been a way of life for him so that it was natural for him to seek a career in the military.

"My father is a career soldier, so I've been around the Army and really like it. I got used to it," Green said.

NCO (Non-Commissioned Officer) adviser Sgt. Maj. Herman L. Trent offered some reasons why these men would want to be Special Forces members.

A Ranger for 19 years, Trent said, "Rangers, Special Forces, Airborne—these are elite forces. Those officers are pretty much destined to make it. It is a desire to be a little better than the rest," he added.

But qualities of desire and endurance are not the only ones necessary for the SF candidates. After four weeks of physical training the candidates have more tests to pass.

The first test for this semester's candidate class was a river crossing, the purpose of which is to get as many men across a river with a minimum of people and equipment wet. A second test is rapelling—the vertical descent of a cliff.

After all of this, SF candidates must pass a Board of Review made up of five senior officers in the unit. They are evaluated in terms of "attitude, reaction to the program and retention of training."

After passing the Board of Review, each person is responsible for continuing his own physical training.

But there are some students who like to sleep in every morning....

Cadet earns ROTC grant; first Westerner to receive award

Wade Kenneth Talley, a senior English major from Bowling Green, is the first Western ROTC cadet ever to earn an Army ROTC fellowship.

He was also the only recipient of the grant from any Kentucky college with an ROTC program. Only 60 fellowships were awarded throughout the nation.

The grant is awarded on the basis of Graduate Record Exam scores, academic achievement and leadership potential. Winning the grant means that Talley can now pursue a graduate degree at the college of his choice while receiving full pay and all the other Army benefits. With his lieutenant's pay, plus the costs of college, which are all paid by the Army, his fellowship becomes worth well over $12,000.

Talley will graduate in May and will be commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in the regular Army.

He plans to serve one three-year tour of duty before attending graduate school. He plans to study journalism, but has not decided on a college.

Col. William E. Schiller, professor of military science, said Talley "is an outstanding cadet with an outstanding future in the Army, should he decide to pursue the military as a career."

Col. Schiller says the fellowship is an honor that a cadet wins through his own abilities and achievements.

WKU hams transmit emergency calls during tornado

By RUSSELL MOBLEY

As tornadoes swept through Kentucky two weeks ago, Western's Amateur Radio Club, WB4DQM, played a part in the transmission of emergency transmissions throughout the state.

According to Steve Morgan, a member of Western's Amateur Radio Club, the station helped coordinate communications between the Red Cross, Civil Defense and Warren County law enforcement personnel, until March 30, when high winds damaged the station's antennas. Until that time, the station was operated by Morgan and Steve Terry, another member of Western's Amateur Radio Club.

Morgan said the station acted as net control for the Kentucky Emergency Traffic Net. He explained net control as "a station which monitors messages and insures stations are available to receive the transmissions."

Morgan said the station provided communications between Bowling Green and tragedy stricken areas in Kentucky. It also passed more than 100 pieces of priority emergency messages in and out of the state, he said.

As a result of the inoperability of Western's station on Wednesday, April 3, it was necessary for Morgan and other amateur radio operators from Glasgow and Bowling Green to go into mobile operation, utilizing four mobile sets.

Western's amateur station has been in operation since 1965. "The station is open to operation by any holder of an amateur radio operator's license and who is also connected with the University," Morgan said. The station is located on the fourth floor of the Thompson Science Complex in Room 417.

Morgan said a Western Amateur Radio Club has been formed to utilize the facilities. Members are Morgan, a senior from Owensboro; Gary Sivak, a senior from Louisville; Terry Climer, a junior from Lebanon, Tenn.; John Stork, a Bowling Green junior; Rick Robinson, a sophomore from Fern Creek; Terry, a sophomore from Shelbyville, Tenn. and Mark Edwards, a sophomore from Bardonia. The club is under the supervision of Dr. John Reasoner and Max Robinson, both faculty members in the Ogden College of Science and Technology.

Although the original equipment was bought by the University in 1965, the club members have had to finance the station's operation with their own money and with donations of materials from interested persons, Morgan said. The University has installed a new antenna tower to replace the one damaged on March 30, Morgan said.

Morgan said that even though the station operates on a low budget, it could provide the campus and Bowling Green community with many services. Although the purpose for establishing the station was "more or less for a hobby," Morgan said it could be used as an emergency communications center during disasters. Also messages, consisting of 25 words or less, can be sent by students and faculty to any part of the world free of charge. He said persons interested in this service should contact a club member.

Morgan said it would be possible for the station to provide emergency communications for Central Kentucky at any time. However, he said, club members are denied access to the station when the Thompson Complex closes in the evening. He also said a telephone and an emergency generator would be needed. But, the club has been unable to obtain these items through the University, Morgan explained.

According to Morgan, the Kentucky Colonel Amateur Radio Club of Bowling Green and Western's club have attempted to establish a two-meter FM repeater at the station. A repeater "is a device which receives distant weak signals and re-transmits them as strong ones which can be heard over a 30-mile range."

He said a 40-foot tower would be needed to hold two antennae required by the repeater. The clubs have met opposition from the astronomy department, which is concerned the tower "may cause viewing problems when labs are held on the roof of the science building. As it looks now," he said, "a new site for the tower will have to be found."

"Amateur radio has something in it for everyone, whether they're interested in building sets, providing public services or talking to people in other parts of the world," Morgan said.

Anyone interested in learning more about it can attend amateur radio classes at 7 each Tuesday night in Room 417 of the Thompson Complex.

German mystery-comedy film slated

The foreign languages department will present a German language film as part of its Foreign Language Film Series this afternoon and evening at 4 and 7:30 in the Recital Hall of the fine arts center.

The film is titled "Hokus Pokus" and has English subtitles. "Hokus Pokus" is a comedy-mystery involving the murder of a businessman by his wife. The mystery lies in the unraveling of the murder by local law enforcement officials.

An outdoor band concert is slated for tonight at 8:30, weather permitting. The WKU concert band will perform at the amphitheater of the fine arts center. The "twilight recital" will feature student soloists and the jazz band and performing a wide variety of music.

The Alpha-Omega Players of Dallas will present Edgar Lee Master's "Spoon River Anthology" Thursday night in the Celler under West Hall.

The play is sponsored by the Coordinators of Women's Residence Hall Programming in an effort to provide some cultural activities for those in dorms.

The play will be staged at 7 p.m. and again at 9 p.m. The two programs are open to the public.

Rebecca Brown chosen Mountain Laurel entry

By STEPHANIE MADISON

Rebecca Brown, a junior speech pathology and psychology major, has been selected as Western's representative in the 38th annual Kentucky Mountain Laurel Festival.

Miss Brown, a native of Providence, competed with eight other coeds to be Western's representative to the annual festival which will be May 23-26 in Pineville.

Sponsored by Chi Omega sorority, Miss Brown was selected by a panel of judges composed of administrators, students and alumni primarily on the basis of poise and personality.

The festival, held annually in Pineville, dates back to 1931. The first event honored Dr. Thomas Walker, pioneer explorer and surveyor, and celebrated the blooming of the mountain laurel throughout the southern Cumberlands.

Miss Brown will compete with representatives from other state universities and colleges for the title of Laurel Queen. She received a silver tray for being selected to represent Western.

Marcia Jan Brown, a sophomore elementary education major from Bowling Green, was selected as first runner-up. Miss Brown was sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi sorority and she also received a silver tray.

Other contestants were Donnah Davidson, a senior business administration major from LaGrange; Jo-Ellen Miller, a junior secondary education major from Palmouth, Mass.; Tamara Branstetter, a junior special education and psychology major from Summer Shade; Lisa Kitts, a junior textiles and clothing merchandising major from Lake City, Tenn.; Kathleen Rutherford, a sophomore speech and theatre major from Cadiz; Vicki McClurg, a freshman industrial technology major from Covington and Melodellen Dean, a freshman pre-veterinary major from Carrollton.

Black reading hour set for Thursday night

Emphasis on works by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be the subject of a black reading hour entitled "Free at Last, Free at Last," at 7 p.m. Thursday in Theatre 100 of Gordon Wilson Hall. The program is open to the public without charge.

The script for the reading hour is adapted from several of Dr. King's speeches and is sprinkled with examples of past and present black poetry.

The program is the first all-black production on campus and is being staged as part of this month's commemoration of the late Dr. King.

Dr. James Pearce, a member of Western's speech and theatre department, is the adviser for the production, which is being directed by Addie Shelton, a senior from Lexington.

Applewhite: the key to popularity fits darkroom door

By ELAINE AYERS

For Scott Applewhite, the Herald's retired chief photographer, the key to popularity fits the darkroom door.

His pictures may not be worth 1,000 words yet, but he is working on it.

In the confines of an 8 x 10 glossy, there is a lot to be said. Photographs are statements, Applewhite believes, statements which can communicate moods, feelings and events in a way no other medium can.

"Photographs isolate a segment of life. Just to be able to pluck a bit of a second out of time is a neat thing. Photography has been a revelation for me. It's given me an appreciation of the world around me, a visual awareness that was never there before," he says.

Photographers tend to worry quite a bit about an element of their identity—their photographic style. Photo funnies, pictures of things no one else with a camera would even think of wasting a frame on, are Applewhite's forte but not his main focus. He becomes adamant when other photographers attempt to force the funny style on him. "They haven't seen all my negatives, how can they know that's my style?" he demands.

If a perfectly composed photo of an accident victim on Scottsville Road, a mangled, grinning possum, is not indicative of photography by Applewhite, then perhaps his saner efforts, varied though they might be, make a statement about the type of photographer he has become.

Tucked away in a box somewhere is a touching portrait of a grizzled black tobacco picker, a personal favorite. "Maybe that picture isn't an example of honest photography," he says. "The man was really happy, smiling. But for one moment, something changed." The man, cigarette dangling from his mouth, cap askew on his close cropped head, signs of a stubbly beard on his ebony cheeks and chin, looked down. Reflected in that posture were the frustrations of a lifetime of low grade tobacco, droughts and callouses—for the briefest of moments. Click. Applewhite had recorded it forever.

Photography is a serious business and, at times, the senior from Louisville is a serious businessman. He can spend hours perfecting a print, varying contrast and exposure times only to toss it into a trash can a day later. "I really need to learn patience," he says of himself. "Patience is a virtue of any perfectionist. Possibly, so is never being satisfied."

Peer approval is important to any photographer and Applewhite has had his share.

Recently, he took first place in Kentucky Intercollegiate Press Association competition for news photos and second place in feature photos and photo features. The contest was judged by the Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times. The Courier-Journal has accepted Applewhite as one of its two summer photography interns.

As with any endeavor, it's easy to burn oneself out. "If the going gets bad," Applewhite says, "I go out in the country and shoot what I like to shoot. Photography becomes fun again."

He is bored by what he terms "the factory process of taking pictures, the assembly line." Into this category he places the pretty photographers, "the sunset and silhouette photographers," who photograph beauty without participating in it.

As a photocommunicator, Applewhite doesn't set out to be an artist. "I think I have an eye for what can be aesthetically pleasing but if you don't have a feeling when you take the picture, it won't come across when you print it. Some artists are into saying 'it can be anything you want it to be' when you asked them what they've painted. I try to communicate exactly what I felt or saw at the time."

This doesn't mean, however, that in any Applewhite picture there is a clear key to the photographer's psyche. "If I take a picture of a beautiful day, it says that I think it's a beautiful day out. It doesn't say anything about me," he says.

What's inside his blond head is a secret he hasn't let himself in on. "I'm not as responsible a person as I'd like to be but maybe that's just me," he says, smiling wilyly at how that must sound. "I don't really know what would make me happy for the rest of my life."

Photography, maybe. "But, when it's no longer fun, I don't want to do it."

Track and tennis teams have a successful weekend

Staynings, relay team make NCAA

By FRED LAWRENCE

Tony Staynings qualified for the national championships for the second time in two weeks last Saturday when he ran a personal and school record time of 8:40.6 for second place in the 3,000 meter steeplechase. Staynings' performance was one of several outstanding efforts turned in by Topper trackmen Friday and Saturday at the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville.

Only two-time NCAA champion Doug Brown of host Tennessee outran the Topper freshman in the steeple and OVC rival Eddy Leddy of East Tennessee was third. Staynings' previous best for the event was 8:45.8; the NCAA qualifying standard is nine minutes flat. His time is the second fastest in the nation this year and the second fastest ever by a freshman.

Four Topper relay teams lowered school records with the 440 relay team of Virgil Livers, Donald Thornton, Robert Dudley and Robert Ware qualifying for the nationals. According to head track coach Jerry Bean, this is the first time a Western 440 relay team has qualified for the nationals. The team, which ran 40.6 to lower the school record by two-tenths of a second, finished third.

The 880-yard relay team of Livers, Thornton, Dudley and Harry Bartling also knocked two-tenths off that school record, lowering it to 1:27.7. They were sixth.

In addition to his efforts in these two relays, Dudley also qualified for the nationals in the 100-yard dash with a time of 9.5. He was third. Six Toppers have qualified for the nationals in individual events and two more on the relay team.

The last two school records to fall were in the distance medley and four-mile relays. The team of Bartling (47.8 for the 440), David Jagers (1:53 for the 880), Ross Munro (3:00.9 for three-quarters) and Nick Rose (4:02.2 for the mile) ran 9:44.3 for third. The old school record was 9:58.

Running second only to world indoor recordholder Indiana, the Topper four-mile relay team ran the second fastest time outdoors this year with a 16:32.5 clocking. Joe Tinius ran 4:11.3, Staynings 4:09.2, Munro 4:05.9 and Rose 4:06.5. Bean said he felt the team would be ready to challenge IU for the four-mile relay title by April 26-27 at the Drake Relays.

Western's team in the two-mile relay ran 8:42.5 for seventh. The team consisted of Tinius (1:56.3), Swag Hartel (1:54.2), Louis DeFreeze (1:59.2) and Jagers (1:52.8).

The mile relay team of Bartling (50.3), Thornton (48.1), DeFreeze (48.4) and Jagers (48.4) ran 3:15.6 for fifth.

In the field events, Jesse Stuart came up with the only win. He put the shot 62-2 1/4. Emmett Briggs triple jumped 50-6 1/4 for third and long jumped 24 feet even. Chuck Durrant high jumped 6-8 for sixth.

"This was a great meet for us," said Bean. "Our performances are two weeks ahead of last year. This is because we're a year more mature and have more talent." About the relays, Bean said, "Our four-mile relay was just great. Three of our people—Tinius, Staynings and Munro—ran faster than they ever have in their lives."

Western's next meet is a dual Saturday at Eastern.

Griffin's golfers to host Vandy, Evansville today

Western's golfers entertain Vanderbilt and Evansville at 1 p.m. today at Park Mammoth.

Coch Frank Griffin's troops have compiled a 1-0 dual record heading into tomorrow's triangular. They downed Muskegon for that victory and finished 11th in the Intercollegiate Golf Classic in Florida two weeks ago for their only action of the spring.

Griffin said that his team is doing as well as expected considering the fact that it is an all-freshman squad. "You really can't expect much from these boys in their first year," he stated. "They have so much to learn."

Charlie Bowers continues to pace the Toppers. Griffin said that Bowers was performing admirably for a freshman and said the Nashville native was one of the better young golfers around.

Western also has a dual match with Kentucky Wesleyan scheduled for Thursday at Park Mammoth.

Toppers split with Austin Peay

By VERENDA SMITH

Saturday was a nice day for home runs. It was also a nice day for sunbathing. And despite the fact that the Western Hilltoppers stayed in the conference race by splitting a doubleheader with OVC foe Austin Peay, it's debatable whether more people were watching the 10 home runs or the girls sunbathing on the bleachers in Clarksville, Tenn.

When Western dropped the first game of the twinbill 15-8 to Austin Peay, a four-time loser in conference play with no wins, it was apparent that if the Toppers didn't take the second game, the spring conference race would be over for them.

By winning the nightcap 6-3, the Toppers assured themselves of a chance of tying for the spring title by sweeping two games from Middle Tennessee here on April 27. If Middle wins both games, the Blue Raiders win the championship. If Western takes both, the Toppers will be tied with Murray and there will be a one-game playoff. If the teams split, Murray will walk away with the Western division OVC championship.

To complicate matters even further, if Western should split with Middle Tennessee and play Murray in a one-game playoff to determine the spring champion, and Western wins that game, there will be another one-game playoff between the two teams—now the fall and spring champions—to determine the Western Division champion. Then that team will have a one-game playoff with the Eastern Division champion to determine the OVC champion.

Western has a 13-6 overall record and will play non-league foe Kentucky Wesleyan here today in a 1 p.m. doubleheader.

The Toppers jumped out to an early six-run lead in the first inning of the first game with the Governors on a series of plays that aren't often seen together. Steve Tate led off the game by hitting a ball that got stuck in the centerfield fence. It was ruled an automatic double.

Steve Tate

Steve Keck followed by knocking a "sure out" right into the first baseman's glove. With the pitcher covering first, the first baseman elected to race Keck to the bag. Keck won the race cleanly.

David Carter followed with another double to set the scene

Two wins move netters to third in OVC race

By DON COLLINS

Coch Ted Hornback's netters rolled on their merry way with two weekend stonings of OVC rivals. The Toppers blasted Eastern by 8-1 on Friday and followed that with a 9-0 shutout of Morehead on Saturday.

The weekend action left the Toppers in third place in the OVC title chase with 27 points, trailing Austin Peay and Middle Tennessee, who are tied with 29.

Bjorn Odengren started the team off right Friday with a 6-2, 6-1 win over Eastern's Scott Barr. Bulent Altinkaya stopped Joe Shaheen in a tough match 6-3, 5-7, 6-1. Stig Ljunggren romped over Guenter Bergmann, 6-1 and 6-1 while Svante Malmsten won a three setter over P.D. Ballard 4-6, 6-1 and 6-0. Hasse Ahman dropped Jim Greenup, 6-3, 6-2 and Jerry Nixon capped off the singles action by beating Rick Heichner, 6-3, 6-3.

Ahman and Odengren lost Western's only match of the weekend in the No. 1 doubles, falling to Barr and Ballard, 6-4,

Home runs mark twin bill for the first of a deluge of homers, this one by designated hitter Gary Larimore.

Dee Deemer singled and Mike Grubb hit a ball that kept rising until it cleared the right-field fence for another home run.

The remaining two Western runs were scored by Keck in the second inning when his single was followed by a walk and Carter's base hit and by Larimore in the seventh inning when he walked and Grubb doubled.

Eight runs wasn't enough to hold down the Austin Peay lineup, though. The Governors came through with five runs in the first inning on two errors, two walks and a grand-slam homer.

A lone run came in the second inning on a walk, a stolen base and a passed ball to put the Governors within one.

The third inning was the same story—two walks and a single were followed by a home run and a triple became a run on an error by the catcher. Halfway through the inning Bill Moore replaced Marty Matusiak, now 4-1, on the mound.

Moore was hit for three runs in the fifth on two walks and a three-run homer. A home run with bases empty in the sixth added the final note of insult to the runaway score.

The second game was the same tale, only this time there were fewer runners on base when the home runs were hit.

An error and a double scored a run for the Governors in the second inning, and the other two runs came in the seventh on a single and a two-run homer.

Peckenpaugh: a bluffer, leader and a good adviser

By JERRY POTTER

The assignment was simple. Go interview all three of Western's candidates for quarterback and do a story on them.

They were the three guys with funny names—Maskill, Hreben and Peckenpaugh. Maskill and Hreben had been around for a while. Peckenpaugh was different. He was a freshman.

Not a true one though, because his roommate, Lonnie Schuster, had fallen on him the fall before, forcing him to miss the entire season with a broken leg.

So he was untried. But that didn't matter much because the coaches said he was the man for the job. They said he was smart, could throw the ball and was a good leader.

To me he was just another football player as I ambled up beside him on that hot September day at the practice field. He was leaned up against a flatbed truck, sipping ice water. Behind us cameras grinded away, filming the mistakes as the second-team offense was destroyed by the first-team defense.

For a time we talked. I noted that he was a journalism major and he said he was interested in making it a career. Then I asked if he thought he could get the job done in football, even though he was an inexperienced freshman.

Without hesitation, he said he thought he could, and be a good sports writer in the process.

That was four years ago. And (Jerry Potter, a 1972 graduate of Western and former sports editor of the Herald, is now a staff writer for the Nashville Banner.)

Leo Peckenpaugh's view of WKU sports was one that's impossible for most sports editors.

Photos by George Wedding

now, after all the boos have echoed into silence, all the statistics have been compiled in the record books, and all the victories have been counted, let it be said that My Man Roger Bill (that's Leo Peckenpaugh to you) did indeed get the job done, both on and off the field.

As a sports writer he has won awards for the past two years from the Kentucky Intercollegiate Press Association.

And as a football player the record book shows his success with five entries, including most touchdown passes thrown. And had he not turned to baseball last spring, causing him to lose his starting job last fall, there would have been more to remember.

But the records are the things that average fans might recall in the years to come. Those of us who watched him closely through those years—ran with the ball with him, as he would say—will recall other things.

Like...

...That he was a bluffer—I learned this one night in Clarksville, Tenn., where a group of us gathered after a Western-Austin Peay basketball game to fire down a few and run with the ball.

At the time, Leo had just been named to the All-Ohio Valley Conference team as a sophomore. And after firing down a few too many, I decided to announce that My Man Roger Bill would be "the best damn quarterback the league had ever seen" by the time he was a senior.

Someone, sitting over in the corner, decided to take exception to the statement. So he rose from his seat and began to clear his voice.

Roger Bill rose from his seat and said: "Sit down over there you meely mouthed XIXIXIX." Too numb to move, two of us decided we'd join Roger Bill and make a stand. Three others, in better control of their facilities, began a quick out under the table.

But don't ya know, heeding Leo's edict, the guy sat back down and never said another word.

As I said, Roger Bill was a bluffer.

...That he was a leader—His coach Jimmy Feix, was the first to discover this. "I've watched Leo play baseball and football ever since he was in grade school," said Feix. "And the thing that impressed me the most about him is that he'd always come up with a way to make the play for you, especially when it came down to him doing it. He just had so much confidence in himself."

Probably the best example of this was the last game of his career against Murray, when he went one for three in the first half and then came back to fire four touchdown passes in the final two quarters to clinch the game, the OVC crown and a playoff berth.

Afterward his teammates gathered around to say thanks, and assure him they would go on without him, for his eligibility was gone.

...And finally, that he was a good adviser—Leo pretty much kept his problems to himself, which seemed to cause a lot of his friends and teammates to impose on him with their troubles. He always had some sort of solution, no matter how unorthodox.

A friend tells the story about the time he went to Leo with a personal problem, which he thought was a secret. He had gone off like a rocket over a girl, who unfortunately didn't get so fired up about him, and the putdown was hard to accept.

"Hell, I know you're hung up on her," said Peckenpaugh, much to the guy's surprise. "I've known it for some time. But I'll tell ya, you can forget her. Hell, you can forget 'em all but six."

"Six?" the guy replied somewhat bewildered.

"Yes, six. Forget 'em all but six and save them for palbearers."

Chalk up another way to punt, when romance has reached fourth down and long yardage.

As you can see, Leo Peckenpaugh is a very unusual person. Someone mentioned this to Feix last fall, when Leo, his wife, and even his dog, were getting all kinds of publicity just because he wasn't starting.

"Never in the history of the league," the fellow told Feix.

Netters stomp Eastern, Morehead, move to third in OVC race

6-7 and 6-1. Ljunggren and Malmsten took the No. 2 doubles over Greenup and Shaheen, 6-1 and 6-2 while Altinkaya and Nixon finished off the 8-1 laughter with a 1-6, 6-3 and 6-3 whipping of Eichmer and Bergmann.

Everyone played super, according to Hornback, in Saturday's action against the Eagles. Morehead took only 18 games the whole day.

Odengren beat Anthony Morson, 6-1, 6-1. Altinkaya captured a 6-0, 6-2 decision over Jeff Williams while Ljunggren was disposing of Bill Spell, 6-2, 6-0. Malmsten turned back Steve Erickson, 6-1, 6-2 and Ahman blanked John Dickinson 6-0, 6-0. Nixon had almost as easy a time as he beat Dane Embrey, 6-0, 6-1. It was more of the same in the doubles as Odengren and Ahman took a 6-2, 6-1 win from Morson and Williams while Ljunggren and Malmsten were running their doubles mark to 15-0 with a 6-0, 6-0 shutout of Embrey and Ralph Hendrickson. Altinkaya and Nixon sent the Western fans home happy with a 6-3, 6-2 win over Spell and Erickson in the No. 3 doubles.

Leo was a bluffer, a good leader, 'his own man'

"has a second-string quarterback gotten so much publicity."
"This is true," Feix admitted, "but never in the history of the league has there been a second-string quarterback like Leo Peckenpaugh."
This is also true. He has ability, confidence and an understanding of others, all traits that would serve him well as a coach.

That's why a friend, who knows of both coaching and sports writing, has advised that he close up his typewriter and get himself a whistle, on the theory that the world needs another good coach a lot more than it needs another good sports writer.

He spent the bigger part of this year trying to convince Leo of that, only to recently get the news that his man was headed back home to Henderson to be the sports editor of the daily paper.

The fellow immediately placed a call to Feix and said, "Coach where did we go wrong?"

"I don't know," Feix answered, "but I've learned one thing about that boy. You can't tell him what to do. He's his own man."

I guess a fellow never learns, not even after four years.

Despite being in only third place in the conference, Hornback said he is pleased with the overall situation for Western. "We're not in too bad shape," he commented. "Really, the key matches will be Middle Tennessee and Austin Peay and our match with Murray before the tournament starts. We could possibly go into the tournament with a four-point lead."

The veteran coach added that as evidenced by the scores, everyone played fairly well. But he said he was particularly pleased with Nixon. "He's so often overlooked because he is the only American on the squad, but he has really been playing fine," Hornback said.

Baseballers split with Gavs

Western got on the scoreboard in the third inning when Tate reached on an error and Grubb, knocked him in with a double. Deener knocked the first of two home runs for another run in the fourth.

With a one-run lead in the top of the seventh inning, Western scored four insurance runs that eventually won the game on a single by Keck and a fielder's choice, followed by back-to-back homers by Deener and Neal Mills.

Five of Western's 20 hits in the twinbill went over the fence. The Toppers committed six errors during the afternoon.

Ashby signs basketball grant-in-aid

One of Kentucky's leading high school guards has become the second outstanding prep prospect to sign an Ohio Valley Conference letter-of-intent with Western in the current basketball recruiting campaign.

Steve Ashby, a 6-0, 180-pounder from Madisonville-North Hopkins High School joins another top guard prospect, Clay County's Gary Gregory.

Radio report is due tive "best suited for the needs of the University."

Members of the committee, appointed last October, are Hardin, dean of academic services; Dr. Charles Anderson, director of media services; Dr. William E. Neel of the dental hygiene department; Dr. Frank Pittman of the industrial education department; Dr. Robert Rees, director of library educational services; William "Skip" Church, a junior mass communications major from Chagrin Falls, Ohio; Jerry Elam, a senior mass communications major from Monticello and Cochran.

Once the committee report is presented to Downing, it is his decision whether or not to take the recommendations to the Board of Regents and whether or not they will be made public. According to informed sources, Downing is in favor of establishing a station and will take the report to the board for its approval.

Election set to determine next student regent

To win, a candidate must receive a majority of all votes cast in the election. If no candidate receives a majority, a run-off election between the two candidates receiving the most votes will be Tuesday, April 30.

The candidates are allowed $50 for campaign expenditures. All other rules will be the same as in the recent ASG general election.

The only other special election for the post was held in 1972, when New Jersey native Ed Jordan was elected ASG president. That year, the election was held as part of the regular fall elections.

According to Ron Beck, assistant dean of student affairs, this year's election will be held next week because the Board of Regents will meet this summer and a duly elected student representative is needed. "It was a choice between not having a student regent this summer and having one (outgoing ASG president Steve Yater) who wasn't legally eligible," Beck said.

Officer installation ceremonies will be in Room 305 of Downing University Center at 5 p.m. today for ASG officers elected last Tuesday.

of mandatory housing.

Questioned about the recent controversial ASG elections, Yater asked, "How in the world, when 1,600 of 10,000 students vote, can they expect a mandate on any of these issues?" He said "nothing" can be done to get students to vote.

Yater said the student affairs office should have direct supervision over the election, with a committee of faculty, students and administration to hear any complaints.

Yater praised the other top people in ASG, and said they were "the four best executive officers that have ever been up here." Much of his compliments centered on Jackson: "I really can't say enough about him," Yater said. He also was pleased with the work of activities vice-president Tom LaCivita, treasurer Lee Goodpaster and secretary Pam Stewart.

"The biggest mistake you can make up here is being influenced by the wrong people," Yater said.

He said he was particularly influenced by the opinions of the executive officers, as well as Downing and Keown. He said he "was never once misled or got any bad advice" from either administrator and added that Keown "is the greatest friend students have on this campus."

Yater said the major difference in his administration and previous ones was his understanding of the University power structure. He said the unsuccessful ASG lawsuit over the 1972 showing of "The Fly," a movie Keown termed "gross," was the main reason for conflict between the administration and Yater's predecessors, Linda Jones and Ed Jordan. Yater refused to put his name on the action when he became president.
